

Emergency pet food bank

The Frederick County Humane Society (FCHS) is an advocate for animal welfare in the community and provides affordable services, resources and programs to help responsible guardians keep their pets healthy, happy and in life-long homes.

In times of economic hardship, FCHS maintains an emergency food bank geared specifically to fulfill the need for Frederick County pet owners who may be struggling financially. From kitten chow to adult dog food, FCHS distributes pet food to residents who are temporarily unable to feed their companions, helping to ensure these pets can stay in their forever homes.

Did you know?

FCHS feeds more than 100 Frederick County dogs and cats on average each month — that's over 700 lbs. of dry food!

Do You Know a Hungry Pet?

If you or someone you know are having a hard time keeping your bowls full, we're here to help. Food can be picked up from the FCHS office and is available to county residents once a month for three consecutive months.

Consider Donating Food!

FCHS relies on the generosity of residents and businesses to keep our pantry stocked. Donations can be dropped by our office or at one of the many drop-off locations throughout the city of Frederick.
